

Paul Vick Architects shortlisted for International Design and Architecture Awards 2013.

PRESS PLAY TO GO TO VIDEO

Paul Vick Architects is proud to announce that they have been shortlisted for the International Design and Architecture Awards 2013 for Beeches, a low energy private house in the West Country.

Beeches is inspired by Dartmoor's powerful landscape of molten rock and big open spaces. To see the house, and the ethos behind it, do please watch our 3min. movie (don't forget the sound and to make full screen). The poem 'the ore awakes...' read in the movie was written by the late poet laureate Ted Hughes – who knew the clients who commissioned the house.

Beeches is built in a Conservation Area. Paul Vick architects still retains its 100% planning permission record (including with listed buildings, new build and those in Conservation Areas).

Beeches has also been featured in: World Architecture News and Devon Life.

